Their enthusiasm and engagement reflected their commitment to learning about global humanitarian issues.

- Speakers and Guests: The seminar featured expert speakers from the Family Planning Association of India, along with faculty members and representatives from Birpara College. They provided valuable insights into the role of research and education in humanitarian work.

Outcomes and Impact

The seminar successfully:

1. Raised awareness about humanitarian challenges and the importance of resilience.
2. Encouraged students to explore research opportunities in the field of humanitarian aid.
3. Fostered collaboration between institutions for future community-oriented projects.

The discussions provided participants with a broader perspective on how their academic and personal efforts can contribute to global resilience and humanitarian actions.

Conclusion

The seminar on Research for Resilience: Exploring Humanitarian Efforts was a significant step towards engaging students in meaningful discussions around humanitarian challenges. The active participation of students and the insights shared by speakers ensured the event's success.

This event underscored the collective responsibility of individuals, communities, and organizations to work towards a more resilient and humanitarian-focused world.
